The Darkness of Lanaia's Garden by Lanaia Lee is aptly titled. Her book is filled with prose about life's darkness and human foibles. However, it is a fresh darkness, not at all filled with self-pity. The poetry is written in an, 'It is what it is' fashion that I found appealing. I particularly enjoyed, 'Silent Predator', as it gives a heartfelt warning about stress. The poem, 'Dreadful Childhood', was especially poignant, felt confessional. Dark poetry is not my usual cup of tea, but I have to applaud Ms. Lee for her work.
